

Dr. Terry Pexton completed medical school at the Chicago College of Osteopathy. While there, he completed an extra year of training in musculoskeletal medicine. He then completed an Internal Medicine residency at Scripps Mercy in San Diego. This was followed by a fellowship in Palliative Care and another fellowship in Interventional Pain Medicine at UCSD. He then worked for a number of years in a traditional Interventional Pain Medicine in a clinic in the Seattle. He is happy to have joined Neuroversion where traditional meets a new and innovative approach to Pain Medicine. Outside of work his biggest joy is his family, followed by guitar and sports. Previously he worked in a molecular biology lab and had a nine-year career as a professional dancer in NYC.
